From this partnership emerged two applications for funding in Cluster 4 of Horizon Europe: TRUSTYCOBOTS - Trustworthy human-robot collaboration through human-machine interfaces and NEUROCOBOTS - Developing brain-machine interface for dynamic human-robot collaboration.

Driving Urban Transitions

Led by the University of Lucerne, the application PERSIST - Positive EnERgy diStrIctS driven by ciTizens has been submitted to the first phase of DUT funding (Driving Urban Transitions). DUT funding partnerships aim to contribute significantly to the global mission on climate neutral cities, the European Green Deal, and the Urban Agenda for the EU by developing and implementing a transformative research and innovation (R&I) programme. The UCILeR team led by Professor Fernanda Paula Oliveira was responsible for the analysis of the current legislation on the creation of energy communities and the implementation of a living lab in Portugal.

Professor Alexandra Aragão, UCILeR integrated researcher, is part of the ALICE project team - Air pollution: a stressor for environmental justice approved by FCT in the call for projects in all scientific fields 2022. The project is coordinated by the University of Aveiro and will address air pollution as a problem of great environmental and health risk. Outdoor air pollution is responsible for 4.2 million deaths worldwide every year. However, pollution affects each person differently, depending on their age and physical condition, but also their socioeconomic status, which influences their ability to cope with this problem. Governments must promote justice, and while legislation is based on these principles of justice, its implementation can have a disproportionate impact on vulnerable and marginalized communities due to startling socioeconomic inequalities. This understanding has led to the emergence of the concept of Environmental Justice, which aims to address these inequalities by establishing links between environmental issues (such as air pollution), social and economic determinants, and habitual location (place of residence, work or leisure) in order to assess the equity of these relationships and identify points of territorial injustice. The project is scheduled to begin in March 2023.

Environmental Building Passport: Electronic Land Registry's Contribution to the Ecological Transition

The event will take place in hybrid form between 9:30 am and 5:30 pm from Trinity College. The climate and environmental crisis, formally declared in 39 countries, forces us to think about new legal models for the energy and ecological transition. In addition to prohibitions and authorizations, planning and incentives, emission permits and green bonds, land registration may be a key legal instrument in the intended transformation. The consideration of environmental and climate aspects reinforces the prominence given to the reality of the building in the land register, giving visibility to the contributions, positive or negative, of each property to the state of the environment and climate at local, national, and global levels. The new environmental and climate functions of the land registry will influence the real estate legal trade through the knowledge of the ecological value of the building, making transactions more transparent and public policies more responsible.
